

Indiana has an extremely effective law limiting the number and type of solicitations over the phone to consumers. It is working well and should not be overridden or changed by the Federal Government. What is being handled effectively at the local level should be left alone by the Fed. I can now answer the phone at night knowing that the party on the other end will be someone I wish to speak to.